

FRIENDS OF DEVONSHIRE PARK THEATRE ('The Friends')

DATA PROTECTION POLICY

Purpose and Background

The Friends hold information about members, volunteers and other people involved with our activities. The Friends have a responsibility to look after this information properly, and to comply with the Data Protection Act. The UK Act will be replaced by the EU General Data Protection Regulations (GDPR) from 25th May 2018. It is likely that the GDPR will continue to form the basis of our Data Protection legislation, even once the UK has left the EU, so it is fully taken into account in this policy.

Good Data Protection practice is not just a matter of legal compliance and ticking the boxes. Data Protection is about taking care of people and respecting their privacy. Poor practice or a serious breach could not only harm individuals but would also have a serious effect on the reputation of the group.

DEFINITIONS

'Committee' means the Management Committee for the time being.

'Volunteer' means any member of The Friends who acts as such.

'Member' means any member of The Friends

'we' and 'us' means The Friends

Scope

This policy applies to information relating to identifiable individuals which is held by The Friends.

Our legal basis for using people's data

Everything we do with records about individuals – obtaining the information, storing it, using it, sharing it, even deleting it – will have an acceptable legal basis. There are six of these:

- Consent from the individual (or someone authorised to consent on their behalf).
- Where it is necessary in connection with a contract between The Friends and the individual.
- Where it is necessary because of a legal obligation.
- Where it is necessary in an emergency, to protect an individual's 'vital interests'.
- Where it involves the exercise of a public function.
- Where it is necessary in our legitimate interests, as long as these are not outweighed by the interests of the individual.

Data Protection Principles

Data Protection compliance is based largely on a set of Principles.

The six GDPR Principles say that:

1. Whatever you do with people's information has to be fair and legal. This includes making sure that they know what you are doing with the information about them.

2. When you obtain information you must be clear why you are obtaining it, and must then use it only for the original purpose(s).
3. You must hold the right information for your purposes: it must be adequate, relevant and limited to what is necessary.
4. Your information must be accurate and, where necessary, up to date.
5. You must not hold information longer than necessary.
6. You must have appropriate security to prevent your information being lost, damaged, or getting into the wrong hands.

Our policy sections below reflect each of these principles in more detail.

1. Transparency & purposes (first and second Principles)

We will make key information available to people at the time we collect information from them. This includes:

- the identity and contact details of Friends and the person who is responsible for Data Protection;
- the purposes we intend to use the data for and our 'legal basis' for this (see above);
- what we regard as our 'legitimate interests', if this is our basis for processing;
- any specific recipients of the data or categories of recipients.

Other information will be made available where relevant. This includes:

- the period for which the personal data will be stored, or if that is not possible, the criteria used to determine that period;
- details of the individual's rights, such as to request a copy of all the data held;
- the right to withdraw consent if that is the legal basis for processing (but not retrospectively);
- whether the provision of personal data is a requirement of membership as well as whether the data subject is obliged to provide the personal data and of the possible consequences of failure to provide such data.

We will only tell people things they won't already know. When a member becomes a volunteer we will keep a record about them and their activities with us. We will therefore tell them anything that may not be entirely obvious to them. This could include, for example, any additional purpose(s) that we might use the data for – publicity, perhaps. ('Data' can include photos, videos, CCTV, audio recordings, etc., not just written records.)

Direct marketing

One explicit right that people have is to stop us sending them marketing material (by post, phone, email or text) if they don't want it.

When we collect information from people that might be used for marketing we will say so at the time and ask them if they are happy to hear from us. The wording will be along the lines of: "We would like to keep you up to date with information about opportunities and events within The Friends and how you can support us. Please tick here to indicate which method(s) you are happy for us to use: Mail , Phone , Email .

These rules are only for marketing. They do not stop us from contacting people in whatever is the most convenient way to give them information about things they have already signed up to, or for other administrative purposes.

2. Data quality, record keeping and retention (third, fourth and fifth principles)

Our activities will be more effective and appropriate if we have good quality records about the people we are working for and with. GDPR insists on this. We will ensure we have the information we need, but no more (it must be adequate, relevant and limited to what is necessary) and it will be as accurate as we can make it and – where necessary – kept as up to date as possible. We will not keep it longer than necessary.

We will remind our volunteers that the individual concerned has the right to see all the information recorded about them by The Friends. While Data Protection concerns should never prevent us from recording the information we believe we need, being over-casual, rude or injudicious in an email could easily cause a major crisis for The Friends. This can be a useful discipline in deciding what to record and how to record it.

The Friends will also have a clear policy on how long to keep information.

3. Security (sixth principle)

We will take good care of the information we hold, whether on computer or on paper, and make sure that we have provided guidance and training to our volunteers so that they treat the information appropriately.

In particular, we will think about the risks when data is ‘in transit’ – either on portable devices or when it is being sent out. For example:

- If people are using their personal phone, laptop, camera or other device for The Friend’s purposes there will be clear expectations of how they should be secured.
- When sending information, particularly by email, we will take steps to prevent confidential information being sent to the wrong person. For example, by using password-protected documents and sending the password in a separate email.
- We will also take care not to disclose people’s email addresses or other information inappropriately by carelessly copying in a large number of people or forwarding an email that has been copied widely.
- Information on paper will not be left lying around and will only be taken out of a secure location when this is really necessary.
- Where information is processed for us externally we will expect the external organisation to be able to give us satisfactory guarantees about the security measures they take.

Responsibilities

Responsibility for compliance with Data Protection lies with the Committee, not with any specific individual. The Committee as a whole body will be responsible to keep up to date with any developments, to check that we are complying and have the evidence to prove it, to give advice to volunteers and to handle any issues such as a data breach or a Subject Access Request. The Committee may designate someone to be the lead person. See Appendix 1.

When we work in collaboration with other organisations we will sort out clearly (and in writing) who is responsible for what, in order that there are no Data Protection gaps.

If we engage external suppliers to handle data for us in any way, our contract will set out their responsibilities to handle that data in a way that will not cause us to be in breach.

Approved and adopted this 10th day of May 2018

Chair

APPENDIX 1

Responsibility for compliance with Data Protection lies with the organisation, not with any specific individual. However, the Committee may designate someone to lead on: keeping up to date with any developments; checking that we are complying and have the evidence to prove it; giving advice to volunteers and handling any issues such as a data breach or a Subject Access Request.

The individual currently designated is: _____
